and New Brockton for the Better Housing campaign. It intend to contact every property owner in this vicinity and explain the workings of what seems to me to be the most liberal offer that has ever come under my observation along this line. A large percentage of the property in Elba needs repairs of one kind or another and this program furnishes financial means at liberal rates and on easy terms to property owners who have even reasonable incomes and favorable credit records. My headquarters will be at The Elba Clipper office and I will be glad to talk the matter over with all property owners needing repair work done. Payments on loans may be spread over a period up to 36 months, making the monthly installments quite small. The principal requirement that the borrower's income be at least five times the amount of the monthly payment. For instance, on a loan of $100 the monthly payment, including interest, would be approximately $2.78 which would require an income of only $13.90 per month. Let's get this program going in a big way and will make Elba more attractive and at the same time make our homes more comfortable places in which to live. Reports from cities and towns all over the country state that the program is bringing about fine results and is having a decided influence in bringing about better business conditions.

PAINFULLY INJURED—Western Union Agent Almon Strain received word from Athens Ga., that Miss Maryjene Ham had been painfully but not critically injured in an automobile wreck Sunday. He was informed that it was necessary to take twenty stitches in Miss Marylene's head and that her face was also badly gashed. She also received cuts and bruises on her limbs. It was stated that she had gone from Atlanta to Athens to spend the week-end at the home of her roommate. Information is lacking concerning other details of the accident.

MORE THAN HIS SHARE—It would seem that Dena Perdue is having more than his share of misfortune and worry. His wife and the wife to the hospital at Enterprise Monday morning where she underwent an operation from which she is recovering nicely and expects to be able to return home today (Thursday). Far be it from me to make anything humorous of a serious situation, but I could not help seeing the humorous side of the matter when Dana told me Sunday morning: "My wife is sick. Frank is sick. my cook is sick and my cow is sick." I believe every one will agree that this is too much sickness for any family at one time. Added to this is Mr. Perdue's mother. Mrs W. B. Perdue, is convalescing in the Enterprise hospital with a broken hip. The result of a fall at her home nearly three weeks ago. It is thought that she will have to remain in the hospital nine or ten weeks longer. Dana says the cow is the only member of the family who is not responding satisfactorily to medical treatment.

INEQUALITY—One of the great inequalities that I think of is paying our State legislators only $4 a day to make our laws and the paying judges $20 per day to interpret them.

BASEBALL—Elba's Tower Team of ball tossers journeyed over to Brantley last Thursday and were defeated to the tune of 9 to 3 by Morgan's fast-stepping schoolboy diamond artists. It is reported that the Elba boys played spectacularly on the defensive but were completely baffled by the Brantley curve ball. Two hits one a screaming triple by Catcher Charles English and a single by Howlon, were the sum total of Elba's club-wielding. Will Green Young gave credible mound exhibition for Elba, holding the Brantleyites to five singles. A return game is scheduled for Monday afternoon on the Elba school

Bankhead Explains

Will he have to make a big down payment at first? No, the first annual payment can be deferred one year or so if that is necessary, but naturally he should make it as soon as he could. The payments will be small, and in many cases will amount to no more than rent bonanza paid. There will be no hardships for the worthy tenant who wants to buy a home under this program. It is designed to help him.

What will the rate of interest be on the indebtedness? As low as possible. We don't know yet.

Will this program increase the production of cash crops like cotton, tobacco, wheat and some of the other crops the AAA has been trying to control? No, special efforts will be made to avoid the expansion of production of crops for which the price is below parity.

Will it help new lands into cultivation? No, the plan is to use good land already in cultivation, and will be bought from insurance companies, banks, absentee landlords and others who want to sell, and resold to tenants who want to buy. There will be no speculation or boring. The program is mutual.

There will be no wholesale movement of tenants from one part of the country to another. The plan, as far as possible, is to locate a tenant in the community where he resides, if that is his wish, and he will be helped to stay in that community.

Since the bill was introduced March 26, both Mr. Jones and myself have received many letters asking us to get it passed at this congress so that tenants and landlords can get the benefit of this year's planting season.

If that is your wish, convey it to your senators and congressmen in Washington. It is a pleasure for us to serve you when we know what you want.

ZION CHAPEL SINGING

On last fourth Sunday singers and lovers of singing met at Zion Chapel for singing and preaching. The house was called to order by Chairman J. S. J. Sanders singing one song.

The committee reported the following leaders, three songs each: Harmon Rapp, Jr., John Hussey, E. A. Wilks, A. J. Fuller, Roy Jackson, J. J. Sanders, H. W. Dean, W. T. Sanders, W. M. Mathis, J. H. Jackson, A. W. Mathis, T. F. Sanders, D. F. Cook. Each man closed the singing for preaching one song.

There is a nice crowd who gathers every fourth Sunday morning for singing and preaching. We have good singing and the preacher is Rev. R. F. Pearce. FARM BUREAU OFFICIAL LAUDS PRES. ROOSEVELT

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—J. Litt Edwards, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, has telegraphed President Roosevelt expressing gratification on behalf of thousands of cotton producers in every Alabama county, for his "courageous action in refusing to eliminate the cotton processing tax" and for withstanding the great pressure being placed on you to destroy the farmers' cotton program."

He has also written Alabama Senators and Congressman letters which he says state "we have carefully examined the arguments being used against the cotton program and find that most if not all of them have no foundation in fact."

"So great an effort is being made to destroy the cotton program, through the George amendment to the Soil Relief Bill and otherwise, that farmers throughout this State are naturally alarmed," Edwards told the President.

"Cotton farmers feel that the cotton program has not increased the processing tax levied under the Agricultural Adjustment Act has been their salvation. When you were inaugurated the Cotton South was facing ruin. Conditions are much better now.

"Substitution of work relief funds for funds collected under the processing tax would, in our opinion, be disastrous. Rental and benefit payments might be made from the United States Treasury for a short while, but taxpayers would soon put an end to such practice and the cotton program would collapse. If the government favors bonders and processors of cotton by shifting rental and benefit payments from the soil relief funds, similar action by processors of other agricultural commodities would be in order. Thus the entire AAA program might be destroyed."

ALABAMA FARMERS GET $19,826,262.00

AUBURN, Ala.—Alabama cotton, corn-hog and tobacco farmers have received $19,826,202.33 in rental and benefit payments, reports Dan T. Duncan, director of the state extension service. Cotton farmers have been paid $11,508,817.13 for plowing up and reducing their cotton acreage; corn-hog farmers $144,852.37 for reducing their production, and tobacco farmers $3,053 for joining in the reduction program.

In an effort to increase the farmer's income the AAA has paid farmers of the country $630,606,962 in rental and benefit payments for participating in adjustment programs and has spent $214,651,202 in connection with removal, utilization and conservation of surplus agricultural commodities.

Practically all of this has been paid from the processing tax.

In emphasizing what the program has meant to farmers, agricultural leaders point to the fact that the gross farm income from cotton alone took increased from $5,331,000,000 in 1932, the year before the adjustment program started, to $7,200,000,000 in 1934, an increase of $1,869,000,000.

They also state that the price of cotton has increased from less than 6 cents to 12 cents per pound; wheat from 32 cents to 85 cents per bushel; corn from 20 cents to 82 cents per bushel; cattle increased from $9.00 per ton to $40; hogs from 3 cents to 8 cents per pound; peanuts from 2 cents per pound to over 6 cents per pound; and equal advances in the prices of other farm commodities.

CORN NEEDS SIDE-DRESS 40 DAYS AFTER PLANTING

AUBURN, Ala.—If corn cannot follow winter legume, side-dress 40 days after planting with 100 pounds per acre of either nitrate of soda or nitrate of lime, advises J. C. Ensminger, extension agronomist. "In a large number of experiments and demonstrations conducted at various points in the old State 100 pounds of nitrate gave an increase of about 7 bushels.

"Corn following a good crop of winter legumes needs no fertilizers," he concluded.

HIGHER GRADE FERTILIZERS BRING LARGER COTTON GAIN

AUBURN, Ala.— Experiments conducted by the Alabama Experiment Station indicate that "at present prices Alabama farmers would be better off to the extent of $15,000,000 if the Alabama cotton crop were fertilized with the right kind and the right amount of fertilizer," reports M. J. Funchess, director of the station.

At present Alabama farmers purchase annually something like 100,000 tons of a 3-8-5, 60,000 tons of a 4-8-4, 36,000 tons of a 3-10-3, 25,000 tons of a 2-11-5, and 20,000 tons of 4-10-4 fertilizers.

"These various grades have been used in experimental work and compared with such high-grade fertilizers as a 6-10-4 and a 8-8-4-4 by Reporta Dean Funchess. "A study of the results shows that a 6-8-4 fertilizer when used at the rate of 600 pounds per acre produced 39.20 worth of cotton more per acre than a 2-11-5 grade. Likewise, this 6-8-4 produced $7.48 worth more than a 3-10-3 grade at 600 pounds per acre and $4.48 worth a 4-8-4 or similar grades at 600 pounds per acre. The 6-8-4 fertilizer produced about $4.25 more per acre than these 4-8-4's, etc."

Beginning with the fertilizer season of 1935 a number of fertilizer companies are making the 6-8-4 market higher grades of fertilizers such as 6-8-4 as a result of experimental work done by the experiment station.

BAPTISTS OF STATE TO RAISE $100,000 FOR ORPHANS

What can be more appropriate on Mother's Day next Sunday, May 12, than a cash offering "in memory of MOTHER for Motherless children?" There are 171 children in the Baptist Home at Troy who are without Mother's love and care. They are the wards of the Baptists of Alabama and are supported by free will offerings from the churches and Sunday Schools of the state. That day has been set apart officially by the Baptists of Alabama for a cash contribution. It is expected that they will respond liberally.

The goal is $5,000.00.

About People and Things

SCHOOLS—Another school year is nearing its close. The Elba schools have enjoyed one of the most satisfactory years in their history. The Junior class has already given its annual play, which was a fine success in every way. The Senior class play, entitled "The Girl In The Far Off Seat," will be given at the school auditorium Friday evening, May 10. It is said to be one of the most interesting plots of the many fine senior plays that have been rendered in past years. The participants have been rehearsing tirelessly and faithfully under the direction of Mrs. Dana Perdue and Mrs. Oscar English, and the fact that these two capable critics pronounce it good is sufficient guarantee of the play's merit.

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered Sunday evening, May 12, at the Baptist Church by R. F. Cuff of George Peabody College. Holding the baccalaureate service in the evening instead of at the morning hour is an innovation in Elba, but the change is thought to have struck a popular chord with our people.

Miss Annie Laurie Bullard's elementary music pupils will give a recital at the auditorium on next Thursday evening Miss Bullard's High School pupils will give their recital.

On Wednesday evening Mrs. Dana Perdue's expression pupils will give a recital.

The Sixth grade graduating exercises will be held Thursday morning, May 16.

Class Day exercises of the Junior Class will be held Friday morning, May 17.

Graduating exercises will be held Friday evening, May 17, at the school auditorium. The program will consist of several from the old custom of past years. Instead of having an address by some out-of-town speaker, five papers will be read by members of the graduating class on the following subjects: "Alabama Resources," "Alabama History of Alabama," "A Study of Coffee County and Elba Schools," "Taxes of Coffee County, and Alabama Compared With Other States," "History of Coffee County." These papers have been carefully prepared and contain much interesting and valuable information, the assembling of which should be of great benefit to the compilers as well as to those who hear them read.

All of the evening programs will start at 8 o'clock. The public is cordially invited to all of the exercises.

TENT MEETING—Rev. J. A. Jones of Dothan writes that arrangements are under way to hold a tent revival meeting in West Elba, on the lot adjoining the C. O. Mills home. Brother Jones says in view of the fact that there are so many folks in West Elba who do not attend Sunday School or church anyhow, it is thought that a meeting held in their midst should be of much benefit. An afternoon Sunday School in the neighborhood is contemplated.

PREACHING AT ASBURY—Rev. W. J. Hughes, pastor of the Elba Methodist Church, is preaching at Asbury every Thursday and Friday nights of this week at Asbury Methodist Church, which is a part of Rev. Hughes' charge at Hartford Springs circuit, in the Dothan district. Preaching services are being held at these three points, preceding quarterly conference to be held Saturday at Center Ridge church, all of the churches in the Coffee Springs Circuit.

OMISSION — I inadvertently omitted mentioning in this column last week the fine service held on the night of Thursday, April 25, by the Kinston Business Men's Evangelistic Club at the Methodist Church of that city. In spite of the fact that the annual senoo play was being held at the Kinston school auditorium that night, a fine crowd of enthusiastic men were present at the regular weekly club service. Five members of the Elba club, who were visitors, were given a cordial welcome. The kind words spoken in regard to the Kinston members' appreciation of the Elba club members' efforts in the organization of a club in Kinston and the glowing reports of the Kinston club's work and progress were highly gratifying to us visitors. Rev. W. J. Hughes of Elba and Rev. A. H. Vanlandingham, pastor of the Methodist Churches at Kinston and Samson, were also present. It was indeed an inspiring meeting. The Kinston club is doing a wonderful work.

COMES TO TOWN—Rattlesnakes are coming to town. While passing the J. F. Brunson home in West Elba Sunday afternoon, some colored folks were startled to see a large rattlesnake coiled right in front of the Brunson steps. Two cats seemed to be charmed by the snake, which was "singing" lustily, which is a sure sign that a rattler is in a dangerous mood. An audience quickly gathered and under the expert direction of Water Superintendent Ernest Owen, the snake was speedily dispatched. It measured between six and seven feet in length and had six rattles. The snake's track indicated that it had crawled from under the Brunson house, and as rattlesnakes usually go in pairs, it goes without saying that members of the Brunson family are keeping a sharp lookout for rattler No. 2. It is reported that the last rattlesnake killed in Elba, prior to this one, was dispatched in the Will White residence yard, near the Smith Avenue bridge. That house was a favorite haunt of Mrs. Oscar English, and the fact that these two capable critics pronounce it good is sufficient guarantee of the play's merit.

WHAT'S THE MATTER?—Mr. and Mrs. Marley spent Sunday with his family in Elba. Mr. Marley is serving as government appraiser of Federal Land Bank loans with headquarters at Dadeville. There are 44,000 acres involved, to be taken over by the government for reforestation and game preserve projects. Mr. Marley says that after traveling over the rocky hills and poor lands around Dadeville, he is convinced that Coffee County farmers would get rich if they would put forth the energy that he sees in evidence up there where he is working.

MAD DOG SCARE—Elba is in the throes of another mad dog scare. Saturday morning Councilman James English's valuable bird dog, a favorite all about town, gnawed or broke the rope with which he was tied and ran amuck. He savagely attacked a number of dogs, injuring some of them severely. He was shot and killed and a number of other dogs have also been slain by police officers. Circulars were circulated over town Monday notifying dog owners that all canines would be killed found running loose if not properly muzzled. It is said that a number of the single-strap variety of muzzles being used do not meet the city's regulations and will not protect the wearers from the law's enforcement.

FARMERS CAMP—Things are moving rapidly along at the Farmers' training camp south of Elba. A large and commodious mess hall is nearing completion. A kitchen is located in the center, and 20 cots can be served both ways. An emergency hospital, commissary etc., are some of the other buildings that are being erected. A large athletic field with baseball diamond and grounds for other sports, is being constructed across the highway from the camp. It is said that the camp will be a considerable high class baseball talent among the 250 men now located at the camp and some interesting games are looked forward to. Head Carpenter Black reports that he has his plans well in hand to start erecting

WARREN PIERCE DIES IN OPP HOSPITAL SUNDAY

(Opp Weekly News)

Warren Pierce, fourteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Pierce, died Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock in the Covington County hospital in Andalusia.

He was seriously injured three weeks ago when he jumped from the porch of a neighbor's home while playing with some children. His parents rushed him to the hospital in Andalusia immediately, where an operation was performed and everything that could be done to help him recover was administered. Yesterday morning his brother gave blood for a transfusion and hopes were still held out for his recovery when suddenly his condition became worse in the afternoon and he only lived a short while.

The funeral was held at Alberton Church this morning with Rev. Gilbert of Westview officiating, assisted by Rev. Kelly of Kinston. The body was interred in the Alberton cemetery with arrangements by Patrick of Andalusia.

The large funeral cortege and the many beautiful flowers bespoke the esteem with which this splendid young boy and his family are held in the community.

He is survived by his parents and several brothers and sisters.

DEATH'S CAPTAIN

Tuberculosis, once described as "captain of the men of death," has been demoted, now ranking no higher than sergeant. Heart disease is now the "captain" claiming more than twice as many lives as any other cause of death. Tuberculosis now stands sixth among fatal diseases.

Statistics for the year 1933, the last available, show that for every 100,000 of population in the United States, 202 died of organic heart disease. Next came cancer, 99; Bright's disease, 87; pneumonia, 81; apoplexy, etc., 79, and tuberculosis, 61.

The alarming death rate from heart disease and other maladies resulting from a degeneration of the blood vessels is attributed by many physicians to the stress and worry of our complex modern life. Excessive mental or physical work, with insufficient sleep and recreation; the drive of ambition for success; the intemperate use of stimulants, and other modes of "burning the candle at both ends," tend to throw a too heavy burden upon the heart, and if long continued may end in collapse.

Medical science at present offers little in the way of curative agencies for the condition which these habits bring about. The only means of relief appears to be abandonment of the practices which cause the trouble. Countless lives are shortened because people will not take sufficient rest to enable their bodies to recuperate after strenuous mental or physical activities.

DAVID

AS LONG as the nature of boys remains what it always has been David will have a fresh army of admirers with each new generation, for he is the original of all Jack-the-giant-killer stories and has been the hero of boyhood for three thousand years.

With the exception of St. Paul no human character occupies so large a place in the Bible; of none are we given so vivid and compelling a picture. The most minute traits and characteristics are set forth in such a way as to make certain that the portrait was drawn from life. What a portrait and what a life! A red-headed shepherd boy, tending his flocks and playing his tunes in the lonesome fields, he is sent up to the army at the critical moment when its forces are paralyzed by the menace of the giant Goliath. What the swords of the stoutest warriors have been powerless to accomplish, he achieves by a well directed shot from his shepherd's sling and becomes immediately a national idol. Triumphantly he is carried to the court while the bands play and the pretty girls sing and dance.

And the women answered one another as they played, and said, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands.

Small wonder that Michal, the king's daughter, loved him and became his wife; small wonder that Jonathan, the king's son, formed a friendship with him which is one of the most beautiful in all history. Small wonder either that the king himself was jealous and resentful.

And Saul was very wroth, and the saying displeased him; and he said, They have ascribed unto David ten thousands, and to me they have ascribed but thousands: and what can he have more but the kingdom?

And Saul eyed David from that day and forward.

The jealous eyes of Saul, who was in a place too big for him and finally went mad trying to fill it, drove David out of the court and into the wilderness where soldiers of fortune rallied to him from various motives, and built up a lusty young army which, to his credit, he kept well disciplined and free from the grosser crimes of guerilla warfare. Neither the king's forces nor his plots could prevail against the young man's destiny.

In a previous chapter we have referred to his conquests, his qualities as an administrator, the sin which forms the one black spot upon his reputation, a sin, by the way, which was not so extraordinary in a king of that period and would perhaps have been forgotten but for the magnificent humility of his repentance, and the Psalms that are his eternal claim to remembrance.

LIBERTY NEWS

Elba, Ala., May 7.

Dear Editor:—

Here we are again asking for a little space in your fine paper you are giving us each week. It is fine to have a chance to read the fine letters of so many friends and it is a real treat to write a letter once in a while and tell how busy we farmers are. You see, we have had a lot of rain on the twenty-fifth of April. We had a heavy rain on the twenty-seventh, a heavy rain on the twenty-eighth, a heavy rain on the twenty-ninth, the heaviest rain in several years. I failed to have out anything to catch either of them, as I have so often measured the rain. Will say we had at least twelve inches of water in the four big rains. Last night we had a fine rain and I happened to have a tub out and it showed two and a fourth inches. If you will set a tub in the yard and measure the rain fall you will kinder learn how much rain we have and you will see there are a lot more in some places than others.

Well, we farmers have had a time trying to get a stand of King Cotton. You see, this cotton kinder tickles us. We pet it, we watch it, we like it. Well, as my father said, it is a wonderful plant—a little of it will help us on, too much will pull us down.

We are glad the storm of sickness has kinder passed over, but there is still some sick. Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Boland's baby has been quite sick for a week. S. H. is at Evergreen operating a steam shovel.

Well, it is now raining. It is near eight o'clock. How are those gardens? Well, we have had peas and more peas and some Irish potatoes. Will soon have beans. We have sweet potatoes but they have rotted very bad this time. I have lost more this winter than I have in all thirty years I have been farming. I do not see what caused it. Last winter I did not lose a peck.

The closing of Pine Level school was an event that will long be remembered. The program put on by the ninth grade pupils—I do not see how they did so well. I do not think there were a team of boys and girls anywhere that could have done better, so say Hurrah! for Pine Level. Well, you see, we had such a fine class of teachers. Oh, if we could get them all back next year. There is some talk of adding about two more rooms to the school building. You see, Superintendent Rowe Watson was with us at the close and said many nice things to us. It was real inspiring to have him with us.

The members of Mount Olive Church are planning to paint their church. Already purchased new doors and new windows. I guess the church will soon shine as it should. They have a fine set of young people and few old ones that like to see everything move up and with a leader like Rev. C. P. Andrews it is not much trouble to move on.

Well, the Sunday School is picking up. It seems it has been kinder hard to get started off, but we have met nearly every Sunday but it may be this beautiful month with its fine sunshine and so many beautiful flowers causes us to come out from our hiding place and get busy and make ourselves useful.

Saturday before the fourth Sunday we held our quarterly meeting at Liberty. There was a fine crowd present on account of the death of Miss Fanny Mays, who had lived here among us for many years. It was quite a sad day. She is sleeping in the cemetery at Liberty. Rev. Hughes of Elba conducted the funeral service. We thought it one of the best services we were ever in. Brother Hughes preached for us Sunday evening. We hope to have him with us often. As the funeral took up most of the morning hour, Brother Glenn did not give us the message he would have given us, but it was a fine message. The noon hour was well spent. The ladies spread a real fine dinner. Every one seemed to enjoy it very much. Rev. R. J. Gilbert was at his post Sunday and Sunday night and was at his best. He read the rules of the church Sunday morning. His talk on them was fine. His sermon Sunday night was real fine and the good part there was a fine crowd there to hear it. Every one that can come out every first Sunday to hear a real sermon.

With best wishes to all,
H. I. BOLAND.

SLUMBERING GOLD

TENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS: Young Ed Maitland and the hardened gambler Speed Malone became partners on the trip north to the Yukon gold fields in '97, when word of the rich ores there first came down the Pacific coast. Maitland, son of a New England seafaring family, was determined to win back his lost family fortunes. Frenchy, the fisherman who took him and Speed north; Lucky Rose, beautiful young woman who had given Maitland a ring for a keepsake; Fallon, trail boss of the miners, who resented Rose's attentions to Maitland; Steiner, the money lender; young Pete and his drunken partner, Bill Owens; Brent, old-time prospector; and Garnet, a well-to-do modern one who hired Maitland and Speed to haul his stuff from the beach over the mountains to the Yukon—these were among the crowd that made up the gold seekers. At Liarsville, a camp in the hills, Speed was made trail boss in Fallon's place, because Speed insisted on closing the trail till it could be repaired. When a detachment of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police came riding down the pass and mended the bridge for Speed, there was a truce between him and Fallon and the trail was reopened. Garnet went back to civilization for the winter, leaving his ponies and equipment with Speed and Maitland. But the horses disappeared just after the transfer. After Speed had killed a man in self-defense—a man who had run a crooked shell game at Liarsville—Rose helped find their horses—and decided to build a cabin for the winter near Bennet, a camp policed by the Mounties. Drew, head of the Mounties, said there was a strange legend about a ghostly Siwash that left tracks in the snow—his new man Cathcart was specially interested in it. One night the two partners thought they saw these tracks. Speed wandered off alone and killed a buck. His shots bring Maitland to the scene.—Now go on with the story.

* * * * * * * * *

"Throw up your hands, Bud, quick!" was Speed's startling order. Maitland obeyed and both stood with hands in the air.

The woods gave back no comment.

"Are you bein' hostile or just cautious?" Speed asked.

"If I was a little more cautious," a gruff voice spoke with freezing incisiveness out of the dark, "you wouldn't be talkin'. Stand over on the far side of the fire and keep your eyes this way. Both of ye. Were those your shots a while back?"

With his arms still raised, Speed nodded toward the caribou hide that hung in the fire smoke. "I reckon your dog was trackin' the same deer?"

"Hell," the man growled, in a weird tone that seemed to expect no answer. "Is that dog still alive? See any other travelers along this route?"

"Not around here. . . . Could tell you better if I knowed who you was watchin' for."

Another pause followed before the speaker said, with an effect of challenge, "An oldish, square-built, whisky-faced man."

"With a boy?"

"Yes . . . with a boy. The man's name is Owens."

"He's drowned," Speed said, with a sidelong flicker at his partner.

That left the voice mute for a full minute. "How drowned?" The question had a cold directness.

"All we heard was, he lost his outfit in a game in Skagway."

"Who was he gamblin' with?"

Speed described Fallon.

"What happened to the kid?"

"He trailed over the pass ahead of us. We don't know where he went."

"There wouldn't be a woman with Owens?"

"Not with him. There was a pretty, dark-haired girl in Skagway who looked sort of interested."

This was ignored. "I mean an older woman."

"No."

During a suspended interval Speed stood motionless as stone. The voice spoke at last with a queer note of deliberation. "I needed that deer meat bad. . . . It may be lucky you seen me, and it may be a long ways from it, for you and me both— How good is your memory?"

"Feeble," said Speed.

"How do I know it?"

"All I can say is, we can imagine a man's maybe havin' a good reason for leavin' a sketchy trail. If I didn't figure you for a friend of Pete's, I'd take the chance of reachin' for a gun even now. But if you are, you can bank we've never seen or heard you."

"Stand where you are," the voice said roughly, "for five minutes. I don't need to tell ye what'll happen if you make a move to trace me."

The quiet seemed to be absolute. Not a twig snapped; Maitland could not even detect the stirring of a spruce needle. But Speed's eyes almost imperceptibly traced a course through the shadows to the tree where they had cached the meat.

He allowed a tactful space to elapse before he lowered his arms. Then he went over to the tree where he had hung the meat.

Their ominous visitor had gone, taking with him an even half of the deer.

"I'm a Siwash," Speed muttered finally, "if that ain't the imaginary native Drew's patrolman's been puzzlin' over."

"Did you see him?"

"Just a glimmer when I got up from the fire. He stole in to unhook a piece of deer meat from the tree."

Maitland had a vague sense that he was witholding something. "And that's the prospector Pete was looking for?"

"If you can figure it."

"Why does he wear native furs and moccasins?"

"Because no one in the North, I reckon, pays much notice to a Siwash's trail."

"To cover a gold secret, you mean?" The idea Rose had suggested loomed in Maitland's mind.

Maitland, already slanting with the wind toward the canyon, was almost swept off his feet.

"I dunno," Speed pondered. "They's somethin' more behind this prospector than it's likely either of us can figure."

"His waiting for Owens here would fit with your conclusion about Pete's not having gone down the river. But how would Pete miss him?"

The mysterious man with the mukluks had evidently gone in search of Pete. That seemed the last they were likely to hear of him.

But the next day brought an odd reminder. The lamed and starving malamute they had seen in the timber trailed the scent of the caribou in the sled. Its following them instead of the man it knew gave a grim color to Speed's idea about its owner, and the cruel necessity to which he had been driven.

On the trail the dog kept a cautious distance, but it drew closer under cover of the darkness when they camped. Maitland cut off a strip of frozen meat and threw it out in the snow, at the rim of the firelight. The strip vanished in a flash of wet fangs. So did several more, without visible effect of its aloofness, except that it no longer snarled when it evaded Maitland's approach. He called it "Rusty," because of its miscolored fur.

After a day's log cutting at the place they had chosen for a winter camp, Speed left Maitland to trim timbers for the cabin, while he took the team up to Tagish and hauled down the more necessary part of their outfit.

They set up the cabin walls, and whipsawed the softer spruce into lumber for the floor and fittings, laying aside the best wood to season for the boat.

In the midst of this work they were interrupted by a surprise visit from a mounted patrolman.

"My name's Cathcart," said the corporal, stiffly. It was their first glimpse of Drew's "new man." He was a tall, raw-boned, fresh-colored rookie with frosty eyes, rather narrowly set. "This is an out-of-way place for a camp."

"We chose it so we could launch a boat below the rapids," Maitland explained politely.

"You men have just made a haul for Inspector Drew that took you by way of Lake Lebarge," said Cathcart. "Did you see anything between here and Thirty Mile of a lone Siwash on the trail?"

Speed's eyes narrowed a little in their turn. "No," he said.

The patrolman looked quickly around their camp. "Let me see your guns."

He examined Speed's and handed them back; then picked up the carbine.

"This gun's been used recently," he said.

"We shot a caribou down on Lake Lebarge," said Speed. "Maybe you saw the blood dust."

The partloman seemed discountenanced for a moment. "All right," he said abruptly, and took his departure.

The two partners stared after him, and then exchanged a long unsmiling look.

"Where's the dog?" asked Speed. But Rusty seemed to have vanished at the first scent of the patrolman.

A deathly stillness of cold amber crystalled the White Horse river canyon.

It was early in April. With the first lengthening of daylight a few weeks before, Maitland had started building the boat, which was now almost finished. Speed had been called to Tagish by some message from Drew.

Today a pale and furtive sun had risen high enough to send some oblique rays into the canyon. But the delicate harbinger had perished at birth. In the western sky a strangely hued pall of vapor was stifling the sun gleams.

From a bank above him, the malamute, Rusty, gave a low whine and nosed the wind with a faint bristling of his guard fur.

Warned by its nervousness, Maitland stowed his tools. He thought it strange that the dog should show so much uneasiness about a still distant storm, and wondered if there might be something else in the seemingly lifeless air.

Taking a length of rawhide, Maitland leashed the dog in a squaw hitch, and gave it its head, curious to learn what was troubling it. The dog halted at last on the crest of a long ravine. A lifting shiver ran through the malamute's fur. He gave a trailing desolate howl.

Out of the canyon rose a vaguely prolonged moan like the tremor of a deep organ stop. With that breath, incredibly cold, the air came to life. It was like a gasping exhalation from the indraught that had made the void. And now the pall from the West came streaming, in needle points, a flick ahead of the blast. Instantly the moan in the canyon leaped to a snarling bellow, and to a whine and a whistle and a scream from the bending timber on the cliffs.

Maitland, already slanting with the wind toward the canyon, was almost swept off his feet. The malamute kited before him at the end of the lease.

In aseething draw at the foot of the slope, he caught a momentary glimpse of the tracks of some animal—erased before his eyes by powdered drift. Shortly afterward, as he came out of the wallow he saw below him, dimly through the blinded air, the effigy of a riderless white horse, standing with its tail to the wind and its head low.

The malamute's pull on the line carried him on till he staggered against the flank of the white horse itself. When he groped to its head he had a vague glimpse of Rusty, a yard away, standing over a mound in the dancing snow.

A cold foreboding of the truth already chilled his heart. He stooped down, brushing the snow from the head of the fallen rider with one hand, while he dropped Rusty's tether from the other to try and unblind his eyes with stiffened fingers. A murmur of protest choked him at sight of a golden glimmer in the snow. It was Pete!

He raised the boy's slight form. Clumsily he lifted the light burden to his shoulder, and felt for Rusty's line.

The dog was gone. The malamute, he thought, had answered a simple savage law, and was finding its own shelter.

From one ravine to another he battled through the tearing maze for what seemed a mile. Swaying in the storm, with its ghastly chaos screaming in his ears, he stopped to marshal his senses. He was lost. He changed his direction on a mere gamble. Fortunately he was prevented from testing it.

He had hardly started when something dark wisped by him, like a fragment of tumbling storm wrack; the sight of it stung his blood into sharper life and halted him. It appeared again, and his heart leaped with a great thankfulness as Rusty's wolfish head pushed through the welter within reach of his hand. The malamute was peering up at him through rimmed slits of eyelids, its guard hair plastered and parted by the driving scud.

Unable to trust his fingers, he wound the line round his arm. The rest lay with the dog; and Rusty's first move turned him from the course he had almost taken. Within a few minutes they were in the river canyon. After a timeless struggle up that roaring gut, they brought up against the cabin roof.

Careful still of his burden, he slid down through the drift that smoked around the door, and stumbled inside.

He slid to the floor beside the low bunk and placed Pete into it. He slipped a tarpaulin under the lifeless figure and scooped a bucketful of snow from the drift. Without knowing whether raw whiskey was the right medicine, he forced a spoonful between the white teeth, praying that it was. To remove the riding boots, he slit the leather down the seams. He cut through every tight garment in order to save time.

At sight of the form he revealed, a murmur of complete astonishment fell from him. The adolescence of the slim, virginal figure had concealed the strange fact that Pete was a girl!

Amazed as he was, his hands did not pause. Covering her with snow, he rubbed the snow crystals against her flesh, with a cold fear in his heart that he was too late.

A Helping Hand for Constipation Sufferers
Dr. HITCHCOCK'S LAXATIVE POWDER
"NATURE'S BEST ASSISTANT"

FARMER JONES AND HIS COW PEN

By JUDGE W. M. BRUNSON

The month of May is very important to a poor farmer, as he either makes or loses his many food crops during that month. About the most important thing for a farmer to do in May is to make sure that he has enough sweet potatoes put out to feed his family and his livestock. No farmer should grow less than two acres of sweet potatoes. A one-horse farmer should have at least two acres and a two-horse farmer should have more. You cannot grow too many sweet potatoes if you are a real farmer, as your cows, hogs, mules and farm hands all like potatoes. If you have not left out enough land for your potato patch, then rent some from a neighbor or take in a fresh place for them. Please do not allow anything to stop you from putting out all the potato slips and vines you can get up from now until the first of July. Next is your collard problem, which is equally as important, but of course you do not need quite so much land in collards. You could hardly have too many collards. No farmer should have less than half an acre in collards. May is the month to put them out if you want to grow large heads for the market. I might add right here that peanut hay is the best fertilizer known for collards. Your cows, mules, hogs, chickens, turkeys and farm hands all consume collards during the winter months. It would be mighty hard for you to have too many collards if you cared for them and fertilized them properly. An ample supply of collards will answer for green feed during the winter months. The third important crop at this time of the year is your citrons. Citrons should not be planted after May if you wish them to produce large citrons. We should either plant our citron seed or see to it that there are a sufficient number of volunteers in our fields. Every terrace should have citrons on it if the land is suitable. You cannot have citrons where the soil is stiff. You must grow your citrons on your sandy soil. I suggest that you secure a tomato can, burn the ends and side so it will be open and use this to transfer your citron plants. You can push the can down in the soil around the plant and by pressing on the sides of the can you will be able to take up the plant and soil together. Make a similar hole where the plant is to be placed and you can slip the can in this hole and pull the tin out. The plants will never know that they have been moved. The important thing is to see to it that you have a real supply of citron plants on your farm. A one-horse farmer should house as many as four wagon loads of citrons and should have enough left in the field to carry his hogs and cows through the winter. Citrons do not cost you anything at all. Not even much time is required for you to have all the citrons you can consume for a year. So do the proper thing and make it possible for your farm to have an ample supply of citrons for next winter. The poorest old plug farmer in the country may have all the citrons he needs if his land is sandy and if he will only see to it that he has the plants scattered about on his farm. I long to see the day when citrons will be housed and sold during the winter months. Any man who has a milk cow can afford to buy citrons if he is buying any kind of cow feed. This month is also your best month for putting out tomatoes. The average family in this section should have as many as ten rows across an acre in tomatoes. You should have an abundance of them as you will want to use them on your table, make catchup, tomato soup, canned tomatoes, pickles and sauces. We should have early and late tomatoes for table use but the month of May is the time to put out your large patch for canning purposes. It is pretty easy for us to grow too many tomatoes but very few of us ever do it. Your health demands the use of tomatoes in large quantities. Your vegetable egg plants should also be put out during this month. Only a few plants are needed but every family should have enough for home consumption and some to spare for the market or the neighbors.

The month of May is also the month in which you are to ascertain as to whether or not you are to have plenty of velvet beans and dry peas this fall. I prefer to plant velvet beans the first few days in May. Field peas do better planted in May than in any other month. We should look into the future as best we can and should make sure that we can gather two tons of velvet beans and one ton of dry peas for each family on the farm. You cannot grow too many peas or velvet beans. The average farmer in this section never has more than about one tenth the amount he needs of such things and there is no one to blame about it except himself.

Well, we are preparing to plant our Spanish peanuts next week. We are breaking the ground broadcast for the third time and believe me it certainly is mellow. We have three acres and we expect to use about ten bushels of seed in planting the patch. We expect to open the rows with a six-inch shovel and the rows will be just as close as we can place them without filling up the other furrow. About ten inches will be the width of the rows. We are going to put the peanuts down about six inches apart in the drill. We are using nine sacks of phosphate and one sack of soda on the patch. Our land is the poorest on the place so I decided it would be best to use just a little soda in order to be sure of a good vine. If your land is good you should not use soda, as it will not pay. We are doing our dead level best to gather five tons of peanuts from the three-acre patch. Since the ground is getting warm the peanuts should come up in about one week. When we see the first peanut sprouting and breaking through the ground we shall harrow the patch off completely. I'm thinking about running my harrow cross ways of the rows. If I do this it will help me when I harrow them the second time. I expect to harrow them the second time within ten days of the first. How would you like to sell five tons of Spanish peanuts from three acres of your poorest soil? How many tons of Spanish peanuts do you expect to sell this fall? By using one sack of soda I hope to make enough hay to pay for the fertilizer. I should have about three tons of hay which will more than pay for my one ton of fertilizer. I'm hoping to receive at least $400 from my three-acre peanut patch after I have paid for the picking. How much do you hope to receive from yours? And we still have folks in this country who claim they cannot make a living farming.

Speaking of the month of May reminds me of the farmer's greatest besetting sin and that is the waste of time. When the weather begins to get hot most of us begin to hunt the shade. There seems to be a prevailing opinion in this section of the State that all the shade is in town or around the country stores. I realize that farm work is hard work but I also know that no man in this country ever died from work. Work will not hurt you in the slightest if everything else is properly cared for. Your dissipation will cause you to think that your work is badly against you but it is your dissipation and not your work that hurts. Old Pharaoh tried to destroy the children of Israel by adding to their work, but instead, they increased more rapidly with more work. Nature comes to our rescue and makes us strong when there is more work to do. So don't get the idea that you are about to ruin your health by working, as it cannot be done. The more you work the stronger your physical body will be. If I should go to town or to the country store and hang around for the afternoon it would be just too bad when I got home. Sallie will not have any of this loafing business around where she lives. Everything would be wrong if I stayed in town and loafed as some farmers do. Sallie always knows why I'm going to town and she knows just exactly how long it should take me to do the job. As soon as I have finished with my work I head for home as it saves a lot of explaining if I'm not there on time. I realize that most men claim to be the boss and they think they have the right to do as they please, but Sallie would soon change your mind if you were her husband for a few days. Sallie says that she is my partner and that she has a right to know what I'm doing just as I have a right to know what she is doing. Sallie works all the time and tries to save her time so I admit that she has a right to help me to do the same thing. No farmer needs to go to town oftener than once a week and in fact once each month would be better. If something breaks or happens it is all right to run to town but just enough time to make the trip is all that should be consumed. The man who stays in town or at the country store is not entitled to be successful. Men need to work if they are to have the good things of this life and I have very little patience with the poor man who hangs around town all the time. When the husband goes to town to loiter is a mighty good time for the wife to go visiting and not return until the husband returns. The husband and wife are partners and neither one has the right to dead-beat on the other. Good attention means a good business.

About People And Things

now in the hands of the State, it is necessary to get them back into the hands of the folks. Dr. Braswell says that such men as Donald Comer are in favor of the homestead exemption idea, as he realizes that industry cannot prosper with agriculture "on the bum." Dr. Braswell says one of the first things that should be done is to reduce salaries on "Goat Hill." He says that many State employees in minor positions draw seven times as much annually as do school teachers, who require much higher standards of qualifications.

Dr. Braswell says he thinks the recommended 40 per cent reduction in automobile tag prices will be adopted, probably with the provision that any surplus funds accruing will be used to match Federal funds for road-building. He says it seems to be necessary to have a recess until Fall, as it is impossible to tell prior to that time just how much tax money will be available. He says taxes are being collected on greatly increased scales by the different departments and if the collections continue to show such increases throughout the next quarter, it may not be necessary to levy additional taxes. Only time will tell.

Coffee County's representative-elect to the State Department of Education Kellen when he said that Dr. Keller is absolutely square and absolutely fair in his dealings with the Legislature. That he lays his cards on the table and attempts to use no leading sleight-of-hand performances, as practiced by so many of the other heads of departments.

Dr. Braswell says he will have to go back to Montgomery Friday morning. He says it worries him to see the members of the Legislature going so much against the grain when he has so much that he knows he ought to be doing at home. However, he is not at all discouraged and has hopes that much beneficial legislation will be enacted by the present Legislature.

THROWN BY MULE—Aaron Youngblood, one of Elba's most industrious colored farmers, was seriously injured one day last week when his mule threw him off while crossing a ditch. At the time, Aaron says he did not think he was much hurt and walked to his home, but a little later he became violently ill. He continued to grow worse and was carried by Paul Simmons in Smith Brothers' delivery truck to the Enterprise hospital. It was thought that his appendix had burst and the doctor thought an operation would be advisable at that time. His condition was so serious that Aaron's wife was despaired of for several days, but last Saturday he began to improve and it was announced that he was not suffering with appendicitis, but from injuries caused by the fall from the mule's back. His condition was much improved by Monday that he was able to return home and he is now walking about.

ONE MILLION ACRES ARE DESTROYED BY EROSION

AUBURN, Ala.—Soil erosion—in which the Federal government is now taking a determined stand—is a major destroyer in Alabama. Already one million acres of farm land in this state have been ruined by it for practical tillage purposes and a much larger area is headed in the same direction, according to a report received at the college of agriculture here from the Federal Soil Erosion Service, of which H. H. Bennet is director.

A reconnaissance survey which covered every county in Alabama revealed that 32.9 per cent of the total area was "suffering in some degree from erosion." Explicity, sheet washing was found prevalent on more than 25 million acres; and active gullying on nearly 25 million acres.

Dividing the state for erosion studies, the observers found little or no erosion on 5,616,851 acres or 17.1 per cent of the total area in the state, exclusive of large cities and water.

The observers found also that "one-fourth to three-fourths of the topsoil had been lost on 17,182,166 acres or 32.2 per cent of the total." More than three-fourths of the topsoil and a portion of subsoil had been lost on 8,240,954 acres or 25.0 per cent of the total.

The 22,861,601 acres affected by gullying were divided into "occasional gullies" with 19,908,692 acres or 60.5 per cent," "severe gullies" 2,941,728 acres or 9.0 per cent, and "destroyed by gullies," 5,311 acres.

Most of these soils have lost 50 to 75 per cent of the topsoil by continuous cultivation of clean crops of cotton and corn plus improper handling of the soil. Many deep gullies have been formed completely destroying valuable farm land by the concentration of excess run-off water and the uncontrolled rush down the slopes. Thousands of acres of once fertile farm and pasture land along streams were covered to various depths by inert soil material.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bonneau were visitors to Montgomery Monday.

Mrs. W. J. Hamm, Mrs. B. R. Cole, Miss Margaret Hamm, Sam and Cole Hamm spent Saturday in Montgomery.

Miss Vonélle Bryan and R. V. Bryan were called to Columbia this week on account of the illness of Mrs. L. W. Tubb.

Mrs. Fred Cook and little daughter have returned from Gainesville, Fla., where they spent two weeks with relatives.

Mrs. Ellen Caton, who recently underwent an operation at Lakeview Hospital in Florala, returned to her home in Elba Tuesday afternoon.

TABERNACLE HOME COMING

On May 2 people who were reared and have moved away gathered back at Tabernacle with old associates, and spent the day in singing praises from the Sacred Harp. Tears of happiness, joy and sadness were often seen among the visitors. The writer of this article feels as most singers do that singing Sacred songs feeds the hungry soul with spiritual food that is hard to be obtained elsewhere. I witnessed the funeral of Brother J. G. Redmon next day after the above singing and saw his song book buried with him and I got from that view a glimpse of what Heaven must be—a band of continuous singing and praise. If people would stop and learn this they would no doubt be a better world to live in. We cannot all preach the gospel but we can learn to sing and that will inculcate right living, and living right will enable us to overcome over and be with the angelical band of continuous singers.

The following leaders led for the day: G. W. Strickland led introductory lesson, Strickland lyric, nanny Lee Grant, Jeff Heath, R. E. Culliver, G. V. Langford, B. Horn, D. G. Wood, S. R. Morgan, Obie Wilson, J. M. Lisenby, W. C. Clark, B. G. Peacock, R. A. Lowery, W. T. Bowers, Fred Pralle, J. N. Livings. Memorial lesson leaders were G. M. Heath, Ruben Wilson, Mrs. Pearl Clary, Mrs. Ura Pope. Short address by Rev. Charles Hildreth. Afternoon leaders: T. C. Pope, G. F. Hildreth, M. T. Heath, R. M. Davis, E. W. Byrd, L. E. Johnson, W. W. Bennett, M. English, C. W. Windom, R. C. Lowery, Mrs. Milt Tindol, Willie Phelps, R. A. Matthews, E. Kelley, B. F. Lowery.

Resolutions:—Resolved, that the singers and visitors of the various communities assembled here wish to tender our heartfelt thanks for the bountiful spread and hospitality shown us while in their midst. God's choicest blessings remain with them is our earnest prayer. Adopted.

Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Hudgens and son, Hilton, of Montgomery and Mr. A. J. Hudgens of Geneva, were returned to their homes after spending several days with Mr. Hudgens' daughter, Mrs. E. E. Vaughn, and family.

GROWS LARGE CABBAGE

Pate Lee, well known painter and paper hanger, has proved to many of his friends that he is also a good gardener. Early Monday Mr. Lee left on the editor's desk a cabbage weighing exactly nine pounds. It was one of the nicest we have seen in many years and according to Mr. Lee, he has many in his garden about this same size.

Mrs. B. R. Cole visited relatives in Opp several days last week.

TO MAKE A LONG TALE SHORT

A friend of ours told us yesterday that he believed in dreams until he married one. We're not dreaming when we tell you that no car is any better than its motor, and understanding cars from "A" to "Z" we can more often than otherwise remedy motor "ills" in a short time, unless it's something serious, and do it right.

LITTLE CHILD DIES

Carol Rudolph Grimes, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Grimes, passed away Tuesday night at the family home on Jack, Route 1, after a three weeks illness. He was born on November 26, 1934.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Johnson at Hebron Church on Wednesday morning at ten o'clock and burial was in the cemetery at that place.

COMMENCEMENT SERMON—

The seating capacity of the Baptist Church proved to be all too small to accommodate the great throng of people who assembled Sunday night to attend the commencement sermon to the senior class of Elba High School. In his preliminary remarks, Prof. J. C. Dixon stated that the innovation of holding the baccalaureate services in the evening instead of in the morning, as has been the custom heretofore, proves that the people are too busy in the morning to such evening congregations. However, he said he still favored the evening and hopes that by next year a larger place would be available.

The service opened with a song by the school Glee Club, followed by prayer by Rev. B. B. Franklin. The congregation joined in singing a hymn. Rev. W. J. Hughes read the scripture lesson and the Glee Club rendered another selection. Professor Dixon introduced Mr. T. P. Culf of George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn. Addressing the members of the senior class who had marched in to solemn strains played by Miss Annie Laurie Bullard, Mr. Culf said in part: Crook, and had taken their seats in the front central section, the speaker delivered an unusually interesting and impressive sermon, setting forth the tremendous importance of observing the various phases of morality. The 22 members of the senior class listened with rapt attention and they undoubtedly will long remember the sound advice given by Mr. Culf. A collection was taken for the benefit of the school. The Glee Club rendered an anthem and Professor Dixon pronounced the benediction.

SENIOR PLAY—The annual senior play entitled "The Girl In the Fur Coat," given at the school auditorium last Friday night proved to be of such high calibre and scored such a hit that it was decided to repeat the performance the following Monday night. Both performances were high class, but the performance last night was very best of all senior plays in the history of Elba High School. All the characters performed in a highly creditable manner and the audiences were loud in their praise.

CLOSING OF SCHOOLS—This week is an exceedingly full one so far as every one connected with the Elba schools is concerned. The commencement exercises will be held Friday night, which will bring to a close one of the most successful school years in the schools' history. He informs me that he will probably not return to Elba next year, which is bad news to a host of friends who will greatly miss his ingratiating smile and genial personality.

PREACHED AT ASBURY—Rev. W. J. Hughes closed a three-nights series of preaching services at Asbury Methodist Church, in the Coffee Springs circuit, last Friday night. Brother Hughes reports splendid congregations and interest, although he was badly handicapped the closing night on account of inclement weather. He reported that Tuesday night's service developed into an old-fashioned "shouting Methodist meeting." Mr. and Mrs. C. B. McDowell accompanied Brother Hughes to Asbury Friday night.

ROAD COMMITTEES—The delegation representing the Elba Chamber of Commerce, together with similar delegations from New Brockton, Enterprise and Dothan, which held a conference with Governor Bibb Graves last Wednesday, were cordially received and were given encouragement concerning the paving projects between Elba and Dothan via New Brockton and Enterprise. It is understood that the highway is to be made a federal aid project, which means that it will be of superior construction in much better than would be the case were it to be paved under the three-year plan of the state paying one-third, the State one-third and the Federal Government one-third. The cost is estimated at $6,000 per mile. Under the Federal aid system some of the sharp crooks would be straightened out and much heavier coats of paving would be used.

SOUTHERN IS GOOD FOR ROLLING TRENCH SILOS

AUBURN, Ala.—Good silage is one of the best feeds that can be given animals in winter, says F. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist, who is urging all farmers to include silage in their farming budget.

The best crop for Alabama farmers to grow for filling silos is sorghum. The Texas seeded ribbon (goose neck), a tall-growing late variety, is the most desirable for silage purposes. "Since there is some confusion as to the correct name of this variety, be sure of your seed sources." Burns advises.

The advent of the trench silo should lead to a greater usage of silage by small herd owners, Burns states, for this type of silo is easily adapted to all herd sizes.

Last Sunday, Mother's Day, was a very happy one in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam R. Morgan. They had as their guests the following members of their family: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morgan of Evergreen; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morgan and little daughter of Union Springs; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Morgan, Jr., of Dadeville; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Morgan of Brantley; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gunter and children of New Brockton. Each member of the family presented their mother with a nice and substantial gift in token of their love for her.

Fred Folsom of Montgomery was in Elba this week visiting relatives and transacting business.

Miss Lallie Harper of Dothan was the guest of relatives during the week-end.

Odell and Bartlett Pryor have returned to their home in New Brockton after spending a few days in Elba with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Lindsey.
